A Message from Dean Mani Sehgal

Mani Sehgal
Dean of the College of Professional Studies at Hawai'i
Pacific University

As we step into a new year, it's a joy to reconnect and celebrate the growth of our alumni community. Each of you exemplifies the enduring values of Hawai'i Pacific University—aloha, pono, and kuleana—and your achievements inspire the next generation. Today, I'm excited to share the remarkable progress happening at the College of Professional Studies (CPS), made possible by the strong foundation you've helped build.

This year, we've secured a $1.2 million grant to enhance STEM education, empowering teachers who will shape the future of innovation in STEM. Grant Recipient Dr. Eugene Guillian is the Principal Investigator collaborating with the College of Natural and Computational Sciences to support future growth of STEM teachers in education. We are also very proud of Dr. Kathryn Vaughn who was recently awarded Teacher of the Year at HPU.

In addition, our expanding Cybersecurity programs are set to outpace other areas of study, opening unprecedented opportunities for our students. Beginning this January, we started a Master's Program with our partners at 2U, a global online learning platform, to expand the reach of the program beyond the Hawaiian Islands.

All HPU undergraduates have access to A+, Network+ and Security+ certifications, bolstering their skills and career readiness while continuing the legacy of excellence established by you, our alumni.

career has included leadership positions in the Marine Corps and the FBI. His notable journey, much of which unfolded at the Pentagon, began with a pivotal decision to pursue a master's degree at HPU while stationed in Hawai'i.

Born in Los Angeles and raised in Pittsburgh, Simpson grew up with a passion for service. Inspired by the mystique of the Marines and their reputation as the best of the best, he joined the Marine Corps Reserve while still in high school. After graduating from Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania, he commissioned as a Marine Corps officer, embarking on a career that spanned two decades, taking him to locations that include Korea, Afghanistan, Haiti, and Bosnia.

"I thoroughly enjoyed my time in the Marines. I originally wanted to be a pilot, but as a six-foot-six officer who doesn't enjoy roller coasters, I knew that wasn't the right fit for me," Simpson said with a laugh. "Instead, I became a military police officer, which turned out to be a perfect match."

Simpson's Marine Corps service included deployments during Desert Shield, Desert Storm, and the Los Angeles riots, as well as multiple tours at the Pentagon. During 9/11, while serving as a Marine Corps officer and completing advanced studies at the War College, he was handpicked to develop operational plans for Afghanistan, a real honor for a young officer.

It was while stationed at Camp Smith on Oahu and walking by an HPU classroom every day that he was reminded about HPU and the various educational opportunities the University offers to active-duty military members.

"My wife gave me that extra nudge to pursue a master's degree," Simpson said with a smile. "After I inquired, I knew that HPU's human resources program was the right fit for me. I enrolled and absolutely loved my classes. The skills I gained, especially in budgeting, have been invaluable throughout my career."
